Toward the rear of the cabin are the companionway stairs and a sideboard with a ship's lantern. At center rear a door opens on stairs to the lower house. There is a cot with a blanket to the left of the door and a wooden bench against the right wall, with a long table and two straight-backed chairs in front of it. The light from the binnacle above seeps down into the room. Moonlight creeps wearily in through the portholes, and the wind moans in the stubborn angles of the old house. The muffled sound of thundering surf comes from below.

It is early on a clear windy night in the fall of 1900.

The door in the rear is opened slowly and Nat Bartlett's head and shoulders appear over the sill. He glances around the room and seeing no one, enters, making a sign to someone below. DOCTOR HIGGINS follows him into the room and closing the door, looks around with great curiosity. He is a slight, professional-looking man of about thirty-five. NAT BARTLETT is tall, gaunt, and loose-framed. His right arm has been amputated at the shoulder, and the empty sleeve of his mackinaw flaps against his body as he moves. His shoulders have a weary stoop and he appears much older than his thirty years. His voice has a penetrating, hollow quality.

Duration: ca. 48 minutes

Prelude

Nancy Van de Vate

⑤

♩ = 66

The musical score for the prelude is arranged in a standard orchestral format. The woodwind section (Flute, Oboe, Clarinet in Bb, Bassoon) and Horn in F are currently silent. The Percussion section features a large cymbal (S. cym. large) and a pair of tom-toms (Cym. a due). The Piano part provides harmonic support with chords and moving lines. The string section (Violin I, Violin II, Viola, Violoncello, Contrabass) enters with a rhythmic pattern of eighth notes, marked with a forte (f) dynamic.
